ADL Representations Stop "Maxwell Street Days"

In a special dispatch to the Jewish Star William Korey, Director of the Illinois-Missouri Regional Office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in Springfield, Illinois, reports on the "Maxwell Street Day" promotions held in the Belvidere area. He said that the ADL's steps to prevent any repetition of such events.

"Maxwell Street Days" have been marked by offensive stereotypes in masking and costuming. William Korey reports that such days "with all the odious implications which they involve and stimulate tend to become a mushrooming type of affair . . ." Such days, for example, have recently been held in Beloit, Wisconsin, and PawPaw, Michigan. When informed of the Belvidere

Illinois Commission on Human Relations visited the Belvidere area and made representations to the Belvidere Chamber of Commerce. Falkenstein assured the delegation that every effort would be made to prevent the holding of a similar day next year.

A similar "Maxwell Street Day" was scheduled for Dixon, Illinois, for Yom Kippur Day, October 7, but locally alert ADL-B'nai B'rith members involved the Illinois-Missouri Regional Office and caused cancellation of the day.

Yom Kippur Observance To Be This Thursday

The observance of Yom Kippur, the most solemn day of the Jewish religious calendar, begins at sundown, Wednesday, October 6.

Yom Kippur means Day of Atonement, and at special services Wednesday night and Thursday the worshiper seeks the spirit of penitence and an attitude of forgiveness towards those who have done him harm.

The service on Wednesday night commences with the chanting of Kol Nidre, "All Vows," one of the most celebrated of all liturgical melodies. It is a musical prayer beseeching divine mercy for rash conduct during the past year. At sunset on Thursday the services are concluded with a final blast of the ram's horn (shofar), betokening the end of the Holy Day period, which began with the observance of the New Year ten days earlier. According to traditional reckoning this is the year 5715.

Marked by many as a fast day, Yom Kippur was instituted as a result of the injunction in the Book of Numbers in the Bible verse 7, of chapter 29, which calls for a "holy convocation," when "ye shall afflict your souls," which is Scriptural language for fasting.

ERNEST FLEISCHER RECEIVES THREE DEGREES WITHIN THREE MONTHS

Ernest Fleischer, Washington University's first student to receive simultaneously both bachelor and master of business administration degrees last June, recently completed requirements for the bachelor of arts degree in the College of Liberal Arts and received his third degree from the university in three months.

Fleischer, 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fleischer, 7434 Gannon Ave., University City, was able to earn his three degrees within four years by attending three summer sessions of school. Recipient of the Business School's Tiger-Fireside Accounting scholarship and the scholarship award of Alpha Kappa Psi, business honorary, he has maintained an A average since high school.

In addition to his school work, which, in his senior year included studying for master degree oral examinations, writing research paper, and working on course requirements for his three degrees, Fleischer was a member of Phi Eta Sigma, scholastic, and Beta Gamma Sigma, business honorary societies.

As an Army ROTC cadet, Fleischer earned the post of commander of Pershing Rifles, the Army ROTC honorary, ROTC's Eagle Scout award for outstanding work in the Army unit and Alpha Phi Omega, scouting service honorary.

Fleischer is currently working for a law degree at Harvard University School of Law, after which he plans to enter the field of tax law.

RABBI ROSENBLUM TO CONDUCT SEMINARS AT SHAARE EMETH TEMPLE

Rabbi Joseph B. Rosenbloom is planning to give a series of lecture seminars, the first one to be held on October 20 at 8:15 p. m., as part of Shaare Emeth's observance of the 300th anniversary of the Jewish settlement in America.

Other lectures will be held on November 3, November 17, and December 4. Four more sessions are planned for the spring.

ORTHODOX JEWISH SYNAGOGUE BODY OPPOSES ORGANIZED BINGO

The use of religious auspices for the sponsorship of commercialized bingo is condemned as a "desecration and perversion of religious life" in an editorial in the current issue of Orthodox JEWISH LIFE, national magazine published by the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America.

Asserting that by exploiting the "gambling craze" religious groups are "hacking away at their own foundations," the editorial urges the abolition of charity bingo.

The bingo issue was highlighted during the past few weeks by the demolition of a Brooklyn police official who attempted to enforce New York State laws against gambling. Since the incident, some Democratic and Republican leaders have indicated their support for inclusion of legalized bingo proposals in the party planks for the forthcoming November elections.

"The problem of religiously-sponsored bingo-gambling is by no means confined to the state of New York," the editorial declares. "Over the years it has been fought, with varying legal results, in most states. Among some religious denominations, bingo, legal or illegal, is tolerated while in others it is frowned upon or strenuously opposed. There can be no doubt of the Jewish position on the question: The employment of religious auspices or religious premises for the operation of gambling enterprises is a chillul Hashem, a desecration and perversion of religious life."

Federation Facts

(A report of the Jewish Community of St. Louis on some of the activities of the Jewish Federation).

A very unusual thing happened recently that we believe will be of interest to the community especially to the thousands of volunteer workers who solicit contributions in the annual Jewish Welfare Fund Campaign.

The Jewish Federation, as is well known, provides funds each year to many national and international Jewish organizations. Inevitably the amount of money requested by these organizations far exceeds the amount of money available. Every organization says that it needs more money and in most instances they do. We always wish it were possible to give them what they really need.

But a new twist was given to this problem by an organization that is relatively new on the national scene. This is the National Community Relations Advisory Council which is an association of most of the national and local community relations agencies. These organizations operate in the field of combating anti-semitism and strengthening civil and human rights not only for Jews but for all groups in this country. The NCRAC's job is to coordinate, on a national level, the various important activities that are carried on by its member agencies so that the most effective job can be done for American Jewry with the funds that are available.

We were recently advised by the NCRAC that "As a result of a reduction in the NCRAC's budget for 1954 of approximately 4½% we are happy to reduce our request for allocations correspondingly. Since you have already been so good as to pay in full for 1954 at the rate originally requested, we shall forward our check for the refund."

This is the first time to my knowledge that any national organization has voluntarily refunded money to a local community, because it wasn't needed to meet operating requirements.

This is like a very refreshing breeze on a hot and humid summer day. We wish that the spirit behind it would spread to other organizations on the national scene.

Georgia Women Voters Condemn Racial And Religious Election Bias

ATLANTA, Ga. (JTA) — The League of Women Voters of Georgia has issued an appeal to "political leaders and candidates for public offices to see that their political campaigns are free from appeals to racial or religious bias." The appeal followed injection of the religious issue in the Congressional race here, when one candidate made a bid for support on the grounds that his opponent, a Jew, represented the "Jewish minority."

The Southern Israelite, of Atlanta, in an editorial welcoming the stand taken by the League of Women Voters, commented that "political and racial prejudice have no place in our way of life. They are un-democratic, anti-social and anathema to the principles of decency and fair play."

YOU and YOUR CHILD

By Abraham J. Simon, Ph. D., Counselor in Child Development and Family Relations

A fellow professional (Jewish) has chided me for doing a column in an American-Jewish newspaper. (Some of my best Jewish friends are anti-Semitic). His general idea is that there is supposed to be nothing uniquely Jewish about our child-rearing practices. We don't talk Jewish medicine, Jewish law, or Jewish pharmacy. Can there be enough Jewish child psychology to warrant a column in an American-Jewish newspaper?

My own opinion is that there are certain uniquely Jewish attitudes, feelings, values, and way of handling and rearing children. These may be found in varying degrees among other groups, it is true. But their appearance among Jews is so impressive and repetitive, that there is justification for describing them as "Jewish" traits.

Unfortunately, we are not particularly conscious of these any more than a man is conscious of breathing air, or a fish is conscious of swimming in water. But let man and the fish change places. What awareness of those states would instantly develop!

In illustration, may I present several interesting pieces of data. I am informed by a social worker with many years of experience in dealing with unmarried mothers, of occasional preference among non-Jewish girls to place their children for adoption with Jewish couples. The odd request is explained by the idea that Jewish people are supposed to take better care of children. In this way, they assuage guilt over surrender. Social scientists have repeatedly found in many studies that family breakdown in the form of marital conflict, divorce, separation or desertion, is least frequent among Jews. Alcoholism, delinquency, and criminality, especially crimes of violence, are comparably infrequent.

School achievement among Jewish children is very high. The drive to higher education is very much in evidence. The degree of closeness and intensity of family ties seems very powerful. The tie between mother and children is particularly strong, with a special quality in the mother-son relationship. Recent biographical studies have suggested that the basic psychoanalytic conception of the oedipus complex may have a personal origin in Freud, the son of an over-devoted Jewish mother, who had his own neurotic troubles on that account.

In my own practice it is a commonplace, after listening to a tale of woe, associated with elaborate maternal conflicts and anxieties over a child's eating habits, cleanliness, physical care, temperature, aches, (in the course of which it is quite apparent that the mother is overanxious to the point of being fantastically worried over minor things), to hear the remark, "Can it be any different? I am a typical Jewish mother!"

For this reason, many scholars believe that the Jews contribute more than their proportion to mental illness and emotional disturbances generally, although there is still much controversy over this subject.

Under the circumstances, I think it is particularly appropriate that a Jewishly oriented paper, such as this one, have a column on family life and child rearing. While many articles will be of a universal nature, some will have a uniquely "Jewish" content.

Any question as to what is "normal" must after all be judged in relation to the "norms" of the group. Jewish "norms" and standards are different. But let us not chauvinistically assume that the difference is superior; or anti-Semiticly feel that it must be inferior. If Jews contribute negligibly to crimes of violence; they contribute more than their share to certain other crimes, like arson.

Let us rather be aware of certain differences as scientifically valid studies reveal them to be present. We can then as individuals decide how we want to react to these differences, recognizing the degree to which they are part of our social situation, or uniquely personal within ourselves.

FAMILY WORSHIP SERVICES FOR JEWISH AND AMERICAN HOLIDAYS

Condensed from an article in "The Jewish Teacher"

By RABBI BERTRAM KLAUSNER, B'nai El Temple

Those of you who read the September 27 issue of Newsweek probably read the clever advertisement in rhyme by the McCall magazine: "Family Life, like family dress, Has found a new togetherness. Where once the members laissez faire,

Today their interests are shared. And this togetherness applies To what the family wants or buys. Before they realize a dream, They huddle—like a football team. No longer is it "he" or "she," But "you and I," and "they" or "we."

This also goes for what you read— It must resolve a family need."

And may I add, religion, too, Now takes the family point of view.

It is with all seriousness that I have added the additional two lines to a simple verse that I feel touches the crux of family harmony today. A new and healthier attitude toward parent and child "togetherness" is more prominent today than it has been for several generations.

With family activity being the trend, what could more naturally follow the family gathering at the Shabbos table, than for them to adjourn together to a worship service that is spiritually satisfying to both parent and child, yet geared to the religious understanding of the youngster.

All of us agree that it is impossible to give a child a thorough indoctrination in Jewish education, ideals, history, ceremony and customs in a few scant hours on Sunday morning. We also agree that in order for the religious school teaching to be most effective, the suggestions for ceremony and tradition must be carried out in the home. The same thing holds true of worship. No classroom session in "how" to observe the holidays can be nearly as effective as an actual session spent "in observance" of the holidays. It is not enough to teach about worship, it must be a real and vital and living experience—through a service which encourages parents and children "to worship together in the beauty of holiness."

It is with these ends in mind that I have written a coordinated series of Family Worship Services for the religious year, to be given on the Friday evening preceding or during a Jewish or American Holiday.

Bearing in mind the "sitting span" of the little ones, these services, including simple pulpit pageantry which does not make a theater of the Temple, take no longer than forty-five minutes. Far from being "spectator services," they contain large portions of "audience" participation.

To mention just a few of the details. Beginning with the Friday prior to Rosh Hashona, in the manner of the traditional S'lichos service " * * * parents and children seek communion with God in order to prepare themselves in body and in spirit for the coming Days of Awe * * * " As the service progresses, parents and children, with quietude and dignity, come hand in hand "before the Ark for a brief moment of silent prayer."

With our American Thanksgiving becoming more and more "a day of eating Turkey, and less and less a day of thankfulness for the privilege of freedom and worship and for the blessings of plenty," the November service on the Friday before Thanksgiving is meant "to arouse in the children of this generation an awareness of the everyday blessings which they take for granted." Prayers of thanksgiving for our country and our faith, and a reaffirmation of our loyalty to each through the "pledge of allegiance and Na-a-se-v'nishma" set the tone.

The story of Chanukah is made alive and exciting as the Book of Maccabees is read responsively with the Congregation reading the key or climatic sentences, and the ritual of the candle lighting service provides the setting for any simple Chanukah pageant, to be inserted without making a distinct break between service and pageantry.

February with Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Brotherhood Week, Race Relations Sabbath, and the anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scouts offers a wealth of material all of which has been absorbed in a Patriotic Service.

For Passover, I have combined the traditional Madrigal if Numbers with an original madrigal by Rabbi Abraham Shindeling entitled, "Who Knows America?" The unfolding of the combined madrigal, "Who Knows Judaism, Who Knows America" with the questions from the pulpit and the answers from the young worshippers, reveals to us the faith of our fathers as well as our American heritage.

There is also a service for Succoth which highlights the young child being inducted into the study of Torah, as well as the harvest aspect of the festival. A special Sabbath service demonstrates the unique qualities of this weekly holiday, and the Purim service offers a timely place to explain not only the Scroll of Esther but the four other scrolls of the Bible.

These services, says Samuel Grand, Associate Director of Education of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, demonstrate "a vivid example of the proposition that the Temple is a family institution."

The thrill of worshipping together is second to no exciting adventure that parents and children can have together!

Thank You

It was most encouraging to receive the many New Year greetings during the past week. The editor and staff of the Jewish Star would like to extend a hearty "thank you" to the many well-wishers. We hope that the many friends of the Star will understand that the pressure of time forbids the mailing of any personal wishes and that they will accept our sincere greetings in this way.

Discrimination In The Daily Press

In the fall of 1946 four Negroes were lynched in Georgia. Motivated by this ghastly incident, the New York Times ran the following editorial: "The Press has a special and heavy responsibility, not merely editorially . . . but in the treatment of news. . . . Some newspapers treat news about Negroes in separate sections of columns, extending Jim Crowism to the printed page. In others discrimination is less flagrant, but Negroes are often identified whereas members of other races are not. . . . This newspaper has considered its obligation to its readers in the light of these facts and principles. This consideration has led us to adhere to the rule that the race of a person suspected or accused of a crime shall not be published unless there is a legitimate purpose to be served thereby."

Neither the Post-Dispatch nor the Globe-Democrat has ever followed this lead of the Times. Both have maintained their policy of denoting race if the person in question is of any race but white.

A letter on the Post-Dispatch's editorial page branded this practice last week. We, too, are slightly baffled at the glaring discrepancy between the Post-Dispatch's enlightened policy on its editorial pages and the practice in its news sections. Prejudice, as is evident from the "Maxwell Street Day" story on our front page, has strong support and needs little help from St. Louis' daily papers.

We feel somewhat out of place reminding the Post-Dispatch and Globe-Democrat that it is by deeds that constructive policies are implemented. This daily dose of discrimination promoted by the many thousands of Posts and Globes will not aid in the smooth racial integration of our public schools.

Why Fast?

A single fast does not offer religious redemption to the Jew. The fast would have to be followed up by an amended daily life to correct the wrongs of an unthinking past. Why, then, do we Jews observe the Yom Kippur fast?

Is it not the lack of discipline both in personal as well as in international relationships which are basic to the many ills afflicting our society? The cleverness of gadgets has outdistanced our social maturity. We pay homage to the crushing power of science but label moral scruples as unrealistic.

In the fast we find a symbolic answer and a remedy. The fast is the absolute antithesis to materialism. The core of its meaning acknowledges that we are rational beings capable of self-discipline, and it affirms the superiority of moral power. Its observance makes us aware of our innate power of self-control.

It is, therefore, not for the past but in recognition of the needs of the future; not out of respect for our parents, but for the mental health of our children; not to assuage a feeling of guilt, but to affirm cheerfully the priority of moral law that we observe this enriching emotional and intellectual experience.

THE LAMP OF LIBERTY

By KARL BAEHR

(Editorial reprinted from "Land Reborn" published by the American Christian Palestine Committee)

America's strength in the free world today rests in no small degree upon the fact that we are a polygenetic nation whose many peoples have never lost a sympathetic interest in the lands of their ancestry. Thus, when the lamp of liberty is extinguished in some part of the world there are always some American citizens who grieve almost as though the lamp had gone out in America. Likewise a threat to liberty and democracy in any part of the world is personalized in the anguish felt by those Americans who fear their friends or relatives in some far-off land may fall prey to tyranny.

It is fortunate, indeed, that in an hour of peril we have stalwart citizens who, heroically and sacrificially, seek to preserve and extend the cause of freedom in various parts of the world.

In Greece

Americans of Greek ancestry have, for example, done an altogether remarkable piece of work in strengthening Greek civilization, providing funds for cultural institutions, and building water systems for outlying, isolated villages. The native passion of the Greek for freedom was kept alive to a significant degree by the material, cultural and spiritual aid from Americans of Greek ancestry who had genuine concern about the future of Greece.

In Italy

Americans of Italian background may be credited with an assist in preventing Italy from going Communist in the first national elections in Italy after World War II. Interest of those of Irish background in the Emerald Isle has become legendary. Americans who

HEADS YOUTH BODY

Miss Ruth Breitman, 20-year-old member of the Bronx YM-YWHA, who was unanimously elected chairman of the National Jewish Welfare Board-sponsored National Jewish Youth Conference at the youth body's seventh annual assembly at Cejwin Camps, Port Jarvis, N. embark on pilgrimages back to Sweden, or belong to the English Speaking Union, or have a passionate interest in the liberation of their Czech or Polish or Hungarian fatherlands from Communist slavery all serve to illustrate the breadth and the strength of America's relationships with sister nations around the world.

In Lebanon

Turning to the record of Americans of Levantine ancestry, one finds that the Arab League State of Lebanon depends for its continued well-being on a unique partnership of emigrants and inhabitants. In effect, nearly one-third of the annual Lebanese budget is contributed in one form or another by the emigrants (of whom 350,000 reside in the United States).

With a similar interest and concern the American Jewish community has taken upon itself the heaviest burden of any group. It has rescued nearly a million dispossessed, persecuted people who needed and wanted a homeland. It has carried on a private "Point Four" program and has thereby achieved justifiable renown in supporting those who are turning back deserts, redeeming broken and backward peoples, and who have already created a democratic society in a one-time feudal region.

Were it not for the adamant refusal of the Arab leaders to accept Israel as a Near East nation; the determination of Russia to fan the flame of conflict for her own interests, and the strategic nature of the area with its fabulous oil pool—were it not for these complicating factors—few would fail to applaud the commendable efforts and objectives of the Zionists.

Woodrow Wilson's Goals

Freedom and self-determination are goals which Woodrow Wilson in 1917 sought for both Jews and Arabs in the Ottoman empire of the Near East. They were worthy goals, then universally supported by the civilized world; they are worthy goals today and must be supported even though selfish and undemocratic interests wish to crush them. It is dishonest to make Israel the scapegoat for the seething unrest, the frustrated and desperate nationalism, and the open conflicts of the Near East region. The cause of freedom can be victorious only if it brings victory to the Israelis and the Arabs—each in his own sphere and consistent with the fundamental needs of each. Certainly the fundamental needs of the Arab nations do not include the destruction of Israel, but rather the displacement of feudal institutions amid patterns of culture which have helped to foster poverty, illiteracy and disease—the arch enemies of democracy—in the region.

The Jews of America, like the Greeks and Italians, the Chinese, the Germans, the Lebanese and all the other groups in America, are to be applauded for shouldering difficult responsibilities, which they alone could successfully undertake in the interest of the free world.

In the case of Israel, the religious factor plays a unique role—a role not paralleled in another group. The Jewish people have been bound together for the past two millennia by a common faith, a vital part of which was the confident belief in the divinely ordained reestablishment of their national existence in the land of

DISCUSSES JWV ACTIVITIES

Editor; Jewish Star:

The Jewish War Veterans of the U.S.A. is the oldest active Veterans organization in our country today. It was founded by Jewish veterans of the Civil War 59 years ago.

You hear a great deal of talk these days about Communism, Socialism, McCarthyism, and a great many other un-Americanisms. The Jewish War Veterans is doing something, not just talking about it.

You probably read the Editorial in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Sunday, August 1st, praising our organization for the stand we have taken against the tactics of Senator McCarthy's committee.

We actively encourage the doctrine of universal liberty, equal rights, and full justice to all men, combatting the powers of bigotry and darkness wherever originating and whatever their target.

As a member of JWV, I am able to report to you first hand on the important work our organization is doing for the community, the voters and the servicemen.

Our non-sectarian program is a diversified one. As outstanding Israel. It has been singularly logical and natural for the majority of the Jews of America to give overwhelming support to an Israel-born, for the cause fits so well into the pattern of the American dream, an American dream that includes a devotion to the Bible and the provision of freedom and opportunity for the dispossessed and persecuted within a democratic society. It is their conviction that to support Israel is to support the ideals of America; and that to be devoted to the heritage of America implies a profound concern for the establishment of those ideals within lands beyond the seas. This is no "dual loyalty"; it is rather an unwavering loyalty to the American dream. And in this conviction they are right.

We firmly believe that the Jewish people of America were not misguided in adhering to that conviction; that their role in nation-building has been consistent with the best American tradition. We applaud their willingness to shoulder the tasks which the exigencies of our day have thrust upon them: to continue unselfishly in the rescue of the dispossessed without restriction; to labor in strengthening the economic and cultural foundations of Israel so that the immigrants welcomed may become integrated in a productive society; to seek the help of our government, the free nations of the world, and the United Nations in working out a just settlement with the Arab states that the benefits of peace may flow to all—Arabs and Jews alike.

(Unanimously approved by the Executive and Advisory Councils of the ACP at their meeting on June 4, 1954 in New York City.)

among our Americanism, Service, and Welfare projects in the local area we list such as: sponsorship of Boy Scout Troops and Junior Achievement Groups; donation of American flags to Schools and Boy Scout Troops; regular visits to Veteran and Service Hospitals where we donate time and money for entertainment of patients, showing movies twice a week to non-ambulatory patients, giving periodic Bingo games, helping to care for personal needs of patients in such ways as providing them with cards and gifts for their families on birthdays and holidays, and helping to care for abandoned children at City Hospital; our weekly brunches for servicemen stationed at Ft. Leonard Wood; our donation of a jungle gym to the children at Firmin Desloge hospital to help them recover from the ravages of cerebral palsy; sending CARE packages to the needy in Europe and Israel.

Our promotion of and participation in Blood Programs have won national recognition.

We take underprivileged children of all faiths, color, and nationalities from many Homes to sporting events, shows, and on personal outings. You may have seen articles and pictures in the newspapers recently of our Operation Kiddieland where over 200 children from 11 different Homes were treated to an afternoon of rides, refreshments, and other treats by our Post.

In these ways we are constantly trying to improve community relations through our active participation in the Allied Veterans Americanism Commission and Jewish Community Relations Council.

With the World Series being played in far-away New York and Cleveland, St. Louis had its own version last Sunday morning out at Heman Park. Beyer Motors, champions of the B'nai Brith Softball League, faced a team composed of all stars from the YMHA loop, winning the game 3 to 2. Although the winners' share was not quite $10,000 a player, the game was hard-fought and a thriller all the way.

The tight pitching battle between Beyer's Jerry Leavitt and the Y's Irv Roselman was knotted at 2 to 2 at the end of the scheduled seven innings. Danny Andrews' long single scored Boobie Harris from third with the game-winning run in the last of the eighth.

The All Stars opened the scoring in the fourth sandwiching two singles around an error for an unearned run. Beyer went ahead in the fifth combining a walk, a single, a double and a sacrifice fly for two runs. The Y came back to tie it in their half of the sixth when two Beyer errors followed Donnie Carofoil's second hit.

Beyer received what turned out to be the break of the game in the top of the seventh. After Joe King, the All Stars' first baseman, doubled with two outs, Saxton connected for a single which looked like a sure run batted in, but King tripped rounding third and was out in a very close play at the plate.
Gus Morganstern, the manager of the All Stars, argued long and loud with umpire Ben Shenberg but to no avail.

Jerry Leavitt hurled a brilliant game for the B'nai Brith champs, registering nine strikeouts, five of them in the first two frames. Irv Roselman also pitched well allowing only five hits, including a single and double by Boobie Harris and a triple by Beyer manager, Jack Dicker.

SENATOR KEFAUVER SAYS ISRAEL'S ALARM OVER ITS SECURITY "WELL FOUNDED"

Calls For U. S. - British Efforts To Effectuate Arab-Israel
Peace

Senator Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, termed as "well founded" the alarm felt by the State of Israel over its security as a result of the "one-sided policy of our State Department in supplying arms to the Arab states, which threatens to upset the status quo and the precarious balance of military power in the area."

"I favor every effort to win the friendship of the Arab states—but not at the expense of impairing our friendship with Israel or imperiling her security," the Democratic leader asserted.

He further emphasized that "Israel is our real ally and dependable friend in that part of the world" and that they "are proof against the blandishments of Communism propaganda and fiercely opposed to totalitarian doctrines of whatever brand."

Senator Kefauver, who returned last week from an extended visit to Europe and the Middle East, made his statement in a special report on his visit to Israel in the form of a letter to Mr. Mortimer May, president of the Zionist Organization of America.

In his statement to the ZOA president, Senator Kefauver paid tribute to Israel's "great constructive efforts to the past few years" which he said "are showing results, in the form of agricultural and industrial progress and improved economic conditions."

Senator Kefauver further asserted that "despite the misgivings and disappointments experienced by Israelis over certain aspects of United States policy in the Middle East, I feel that the great mass of the people are not only deeply grateful to the United States; but have a profound and warm friendship for the American people and a tremendous admiration for the American way of life."

Voicing his opposition to the arming of Arabs at the expense of Israel, the Senator emphasized:

"Anxious as I am to provide bipartisan support for the foreign policies of the Administration, I deem it my duty to warn against any departure from the Administration's own declared policy of impartiality toward Israel and the Arab nations. I am persuaded that it is entirely possible to provide for Israel's security from attack by hostile neighbors and to do so within the context of our general policy in the Middle East."

Senator Kefauver urged that "Before furnishing arms to the Arab states, Britain and the United States should use every effort to effectuate an Arab-Israeli peace."
